Thank you for your support of James!

James reached out to the Society after the pandemic affected his employment. He was working 40-45 hours a week, but his employer suddenly cut his hours down to 16.

“I was struggling and needed help so I reached out to the Society and explained my situation. They told me I could pick up some food once a week for as long as I needed to,” shared James.

The volunteers soon learned that James needed rental assistance or else he would lose his home.

“They helped me out once with my rent. The payment went through, which gave me a chance to catch up on other bills and kept me from being evicted.”

James is slowly getting back to normalcy. He now volunteers at the Food Pantry when he is able to.

“I just want to give back as a thank you for what they gave to me.”
